Jeremiah, originally from Texas, moved to Phoenix in 2003. He started as a summer law clerk at Broening Oberg Woods & Wilson in 2021 and began as an associate in 2023.

Before becoming a lawyer, Jeremiah graduated from the University of Dallas in 2019, cum laude, with a Bachelor's Degree in Politics. After graduation, and prior to attending law school, he moved to Washington, D.C. to work as an executive assistant at Becket Law, a non-profit law firm with extensive experience defending First Amendment rights before the United States Supreme Court. One year later, he attended law school at the Columbus School of Law at the Catholic University of America and graduated in 2023, cum laude.

In law school, Jeremiah worked as a research assistant to J. Joel Alicea. In this role, he researched various issues related to constitutional interpretation theory and edited articles published in law reviews and journals throughout the United States. He also served on the Catholic University Law Review from 2021 through 2023, first as a Staff Editor, and later as a Production Editor for the executive board.

In Jeremiah's free time, he enjoys introducing his wife (a native Marylander) to everything that Arizona has to offer, and unsuccessfully attempting to break 80 at all of the local golf courses.
